New CEO at BioMar

BioMar, the world's third-largest manufacturer of quality feed for the fish farming industry, is making management changes. Torben Svejgård, 53, who has extensive leadership experience, also from 17 years with Danisco, has been named new CEO of BioMar, a company based in Aarhus, Denmark.

Torben Svejgård, 53, formerly CEO for Danisco Texturants & Sweeteners, has been named CEO of BioMar effective from November 1. Mr Svejgård will start at BioMar on September 1. Until taking over the BioMar helm, he will work closely with the current CEO, Nils Agnar Brunborg, who will be leaving at the end of October to seek new challenges in his native country of Norway.

With Torben Svejgård, BioMar gets a highly experienced and resourceful manager with a global outlook who brings with him 25 years of working with B2B businesses. From his previous jobs, Mr Svejgård has an in-depth knowledge of ingredients and raw materials, as well as know-how from his time as an executive with an international business. These characteristics are important in developing BioMar and achieving the company's strategy for global growth in a highly competitive market.
